Déglon: The Silex and Oryx Collections

The Déglon cutlery firm presents its latest collections: Silex and Oryx. The rounded shape of the knife handles in the Silex collection mean that they are easy to grasp. The space provided for the thumb very close to the blade, allows for precise cutting. Both ergonomic and elegant, this collection includes steak knives and kitchen knives.

The Silex collection comes in two ranges: Silex Premium and Silex Color. Knives in the Silex Premium range have handles in pressed, polished wood. A stainless steel rivet that goes right through the handle allows for strong yet discreet assembly of the blade onto the handle. In the Silex Color range, the brick red polypropylene handle is injection overmolded to guarantee strength and seal.

The ultra-modern design of the forged Oryx knife has a molybdenum and vanadium steel blade that offers razor sharp cutting.

The 18/10 stainless steel handle has a satin-finished and creates a perfect seal between the blade and bolster.

Since its establishment in 1921 by Jean Déglon, the Déglon cutlery firm has been making knives and kitchen utensils for both professionals and the general public. Based in Thiers in the Auvergne region and currently directed by his grandson Thierry Déglon, the firm achieves over 20 percent of its turnover in exports.
